

Position Announcement
Linda Arnold Carlisle Distinguished Excellence Professorship in Women's and Gender Studies

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro Women's and Gender Studies Program invites applications for a professorship in Women's and Gender Studies. The professorship will be awarded for a period of four academic years beginning in August 2016. Candidates must be full professors at UNCG when they take up the appointment. Candidates whose promotion to full professor is pending must supply their letter from the UNCG Board of Trustees confirming their promotion. Final appointment to the professorship for candidates undergoing promotion review is contingent upon promotion approval at all levels (i.e., the UNC Board of Governors).

Recommendation of a candidate for the professorship will be made by the Dean, in consultation with the Women's and Gender Studies Program, to the Provost, who with the Chancellor will recommend appointment by the University's Board of Trustees.

The successful candidate will normally be selected from faculty members who have contributed to the Women's and Gender Studies Program. Candidates in all disciplines and departments are invited to apply.

Criteria to be used in recommending and appointing the candidate to the professorship include the following:

- the applicant's scholarly or creative achievement related to women or gender issues
- importance of the work
- potential to enhance the interdisciplinary field of women's and gender studies, specifically the WGS program at UNCG and its place in the community

The professor is expected to engage both with the WGS program and the broader community through activities such as symposia, programs, community-engaged scholarship or public exhibitions or performances. A public presentation by the professor must be an integral part of each year's work (e.g., colloquium, lecture, presentation of essays or creative work in progress). The professor will also be asked, as funds are available, to invite annually to campus a nationally recognized speaker whose work relates to the professor's scholarly or creative activity. This visiting scholar is expected to participate in the Women's and Gender Studies Program through lectures, seminars, performances or other similar activities.

The professor will receive a salary supplement of $5000 annually, and research support of $12,000 per year will be made available to support the professor's work. Candidates are asked to specify a two-year budget that has been approved by the appropriate department head or dean as part of the application process. At the end of two years a budget for the final two years will be required. The budget may include such items as release time, research assistance, books, equipment and supplies, and travel. Application forms are available on line at <http://wgs.uncg.edu>.

The deadline for receipt of completed applications is Wednesday, March 31, 2016. Please send your application to Isabell Moore and Sarah Hamrick, Women's and Gender Studies Program Administrators (wgs@uncg.edu). Questions may be addressed to Karen L.
